STAT

Honorable Charles M. Teague
House of Representatives
Washington 25, D. C.

Dear Mr. Teague:

Referring to your telephone call of January 7, I appreciated receiving the document on Outer and Inner Mongolia by Frederick W. Hinke. We are studying the paper here and are planning - if you see no objection, to make contact with Mr. Hinke in Berkeley, California.

I am quite sure the Fred Hinke is the man I knew years ago in the Foreign Service and his father and my father both taught at the Auburn Theological Seminary many years ago.

We have here in this country few enough experts on the Mongolian situation and I should like to add Hinke to the list for consultation from time to time.

Many thanks for bringing this matter to my attention.

Faithfully yours,

SIGNED

MEMORANDUM FOR: Mr. Dulles

I find that in the Biographic Register for 1957 that Mr. Hinke is listed as a Class 1 Career Officer with the rank of Consul. He served in the Foreign Service for about 35 years approximately 19 or 20 of which were at various posts in China.

Would you like to have this sent down to FE Division to prepare comments which you might pass on to Congressman Teague?

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence

THROUGH : Deputy Director (Intelligence)

SUBJECT : Appraisal of a Paper Entitled "Mongol Nationalism and the 'Inner Mongolia Autonomous Region'" by Frederick W. Hinke

1. The paper provides a historical account of events affecting the Mongol people, especially since the Chinese revolution of 1911, with special emphasis on Mongol nationalism and its possible effects on Chinese Communist rule in Inner Mongolia. The author concludes that the Mongols may yet rise against their Communist oppressors and inspire other Central Asian peoples to do the same, thus posing a serious threat to Communist domination in the area.

2. For historical background, the paper relies heavily on The Mongols of Manchuria by Owen Lattimore, a standard work on the subject published in 1934. Publications of the Hong Kong Consulate General, including "Current Background" and "Survey of China Mainland Press" are cited as authority for more recent events. The author also cites reference works such as The China Yearbook as sources for some of his factual material.

3. Since the paper is based largely on readily available sources and contains very little original research, it does not contribute significantly to our knowledge of the Mongols. The author has also neglected to take into account certain recent trends in Mongolian affairs and this somewhat weakens portions of his argument. The author's evident high regard for the Mongols has led him to describe their plight in rather emotional terms at times and has resulted in highly speculative conclusions which are not fully justified by the evidence.

4. A suggested brief comment for use in acknowledging the paper is attached as Tab A.

Comment on a paper entitled "Mongol Nationalism and the 'Inner Mongolia Autonomous Region'" by Frederick W. Hinkle.

It is extremely difficult to obtain information about Mongolia because of its isolated location. We therefore welcome any reporting on this area.

Of particular interest is Mr. Hinkle's observation that Mongol nationalism is a potentially dynamic factor in the behavior of the Mongol people both in Outer Mongolia and Communist China. Our analysts have for some time held a similar view.
